Chefurs raus! / Čefurji raus! (2013)

Marko and his three friends live in an ill-famed Ljubljana suburb, Fužine. The story of the first two generations of immigrants from the former Yugoslavia playfully uses stereotypes to reveal hidden layers of intolerance in a young European society, and is well seasoned with a typical Balkan tragicomic humour when setting a critical eye on bitter life stories from the edge of the Slovene society.

Shanghai Gypsy / Šanghaj (2012)

Shanghai Gypsy is a love story. A story about four generations is narrated by Lutvija Belmondo Mirga. Lutvija is the central character of the film, a gypsy king, who decided to establish his own gypsy village. He names it Shanghai. Belmondo makes a living on smuggling and his power and influence grow large. Though lucrative, the business starts to threaten Belmondo's personal life and he finds himself at the crossroads.

The King of Shanghai is the story about eternal longing for happiness; it is the story about love and family ties, in which tears are intertwined with laughs. The story is set in times of the downfall of Yugoslavia, in times when many people had forgotten that beauty of life actually lies in small things.
