Soil & Water Conservation District Election

Three seats on the Doña Ana Soil and Water Conservation District board are up for election.

This is the SAME group that tried to raise your property taxes last year to support its right-wing political agenda.

Now we have a chance to elect candidates who will work to help our community, not divide it.

- The District's current board has focused on advancing its extreme political views, instead of collaborating with other groups to conserve our water and other natural resources to benefit our community;
- The current board has taken many anti-environmental positions, including opposing the Organ Mountains-Desert Peaks National Monument, opposing wildlife recovery in the Southwest, and opposing regional planning for sustainable development;
- The District's mission is a good one, and a well-balanced board could play an important role in building a sustainable future for our county.

This election will be decided by a handful of voters.
Your vote is important! Please tell your friends.
