By creating a “claims-free” environment, Landmark successfully managed 18 design firms and 14 major contractors while coordinating $220 million worth of construction on this major theme park.

With Landmark leading the project, the team constructed a 444-acre theme park in 18 months. The owner challenged Landmark to bring the project in on budget and on schedule, keeping in mind that the final design would continue to evolve during construction.

Because of Landmark’s management style, the theme park opened on time, within budget, and has received rave reviews for the quality of construction.

Landmark was later rehired to provide construction management assistance for a 14-month, $140 million expansion of Universal Studios called “Toon Lagoon.”
