Dear Incline Elementary Parents and Guardians:

Last night, we received notification from WCSD regarding our Count Day numbers and the impact on our teacher allocations. Unfortunately, the news is not good: IES is losing one 1st grade allocation, a .5 Special Education allocation, and 1.5 English Language Learner allocation. For our first graders, we will now have three larger classes instead of four smaller classes. We will be redistributing our students next week and will alert 1st grade parents as soon as we have determined our new rosters. For our English Language Learners and Special Education students, we will continue to support these students despite the reduction in our resources with as little negative impact on learning as is possible.

This is a tremendous loss for our community, and we are saddened by the thought of losing great educators. At this time, I have shared the list of WCSD schools who will be hiring new teachers (schools that gained allocations from Count Day) with all teachers, and I should know exactly which of our educators will be impacted by Monday, September 12, 2016.

Lastly, allocation decisions are made at the district level and not at the school level. I will continue to advocate for resources for our Incline students and families and encourage our parents to do the same.

I will continue to provide updates to parents as I receive new information.

Sincerely,
