YOUR GUIDE TO THE FRESHEST LOCAL
FOOD IN CENTRAL ILLINOIS

How this Guide Works

In an effort to create a robust source of information where consumers can find local food, the Buy Fresh Buy Local Central Illinois Chapter and Central Illinois Sustainable Farming Network have partnered to create the 2015-2016 Buy Fresh Buy Local Central Illinois Directory. This directory features farms that have pledged to use sustainable practices and farmers markets, restaurants, retailers, institutions, and distributors that have pledged to source locally whenever possible. When you purchase from any of the members listed in this directory, you can feel confident that you are supporting local businesses, a healthy environment, and a more just food system.

2015-2016 Buy Fresh Buy Local Partners and Programs

Illinois Stewardship Alliance (ISA) is a non-profit organization with members across the state who are re-building local food systems one seed at a time through community gardens, farm to school programs, sustainable agriculture and more. ISA promotes economically viable, environmentally sustainable and socially just local food systems through policy development, advocacy and education. Join the Alliance today! For more information go to www.ilstewards.org, call us at (217) 528-1563 or find us on Facebook.

The Buy Fresh Buy Local Central Illinois chapter, a program of Illinois Stewardship Alliance, is a local foods campaign to connect local farmers with community members, restaurants, retailers, and other local buyers. The Central Illinois chapter is part of a national network of Buy Fresh Buy Local chapters organized by FoodRoutes Network, LLC. To date there are over 75 chapters in 20 states. Visit www.foodroutes.org to learn how FoodRoutes is reintroducing Americans to their food, or visit www.buyfreshbuylocalcentralillinois.org to learn more about the Central Illinois chapter.

Local Flavors, a program of Illinois Stewardship Alliance, is a farm-to-table series held during the height of the growing season that connects Illinois producers with local restaurants. Participating restaurants prepare a daily special highlighting fresh, seasonal, locally sourced food. For more information about participating restaurants and a schedule of events, visit www.buyfreshbuylocalcentralillinois.org, email isa@ilstewards.org, or call 217-528-1563

UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS
EXTENSION

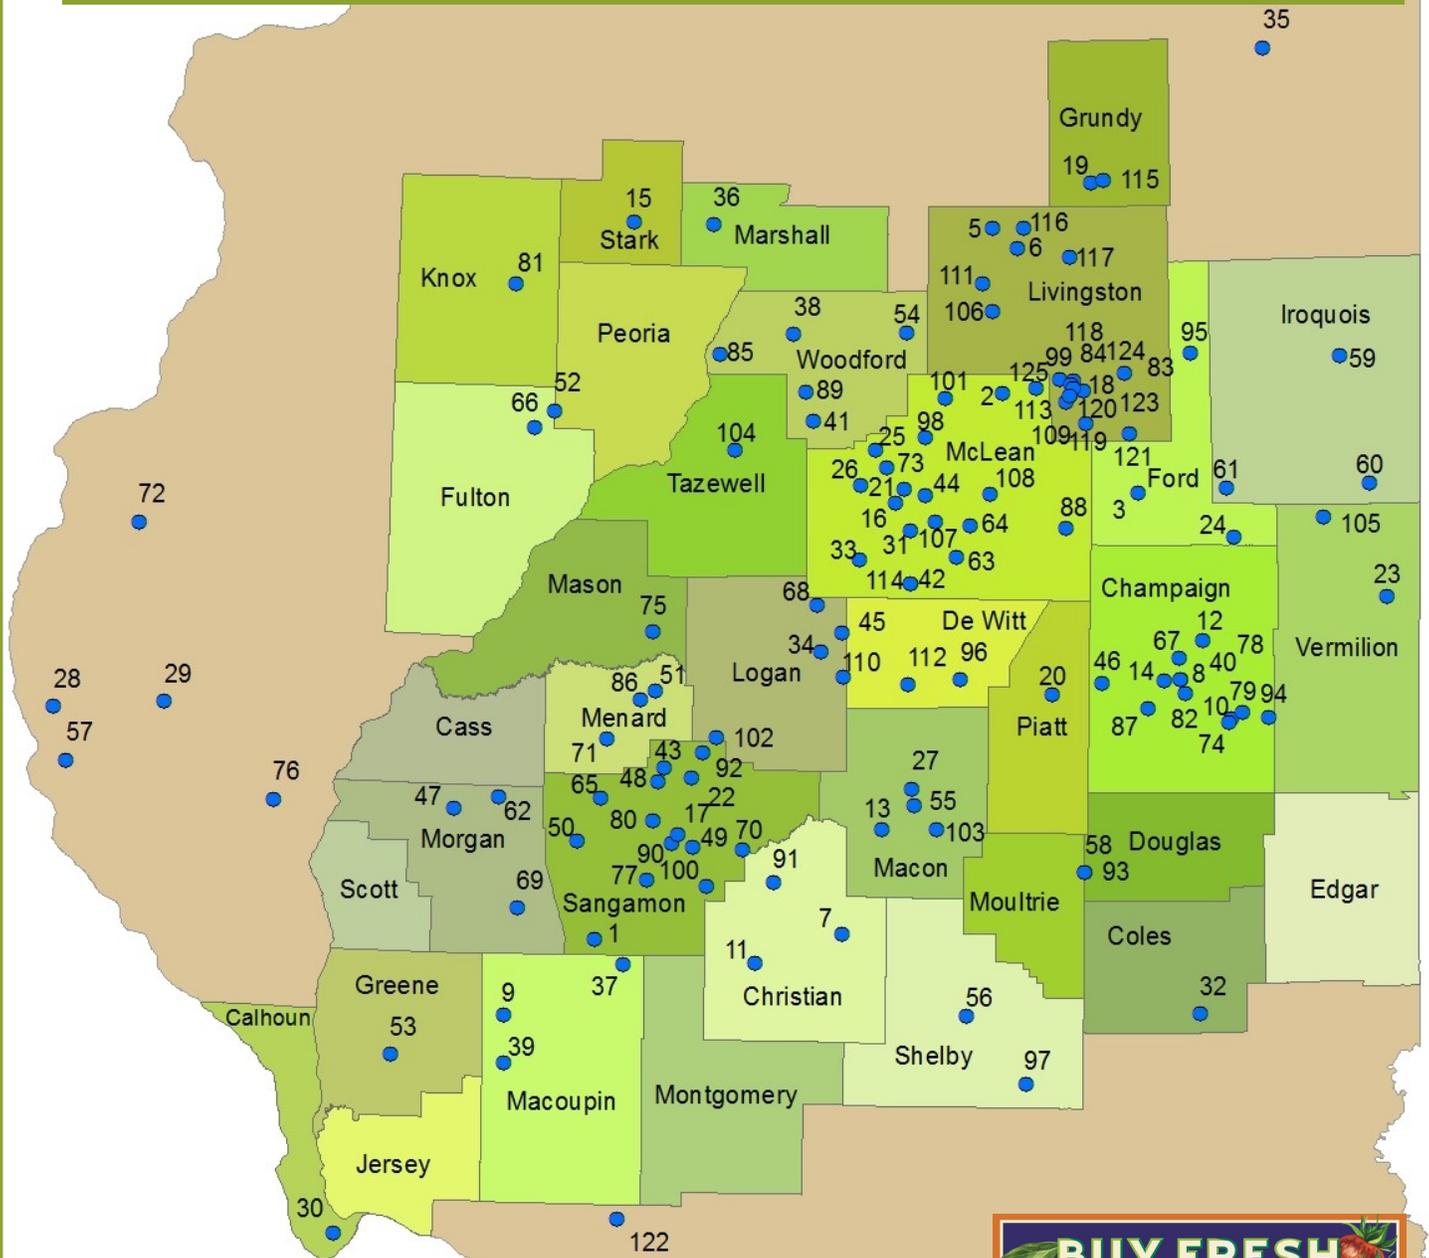

University of Illinois Extension is the flagship outreach effort of the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, offering educational programs to residents of all of Illinois' 102 counties – and far beyond. Through learning partnerships that put knowledge to work, U of I Extension's programs are aimed at making life better, healthier, safer and more profitable for individuals and their communities. The U of I Extension offers educational programs in five broad areas: healthy society; food security and safety; environmental stewardship; sustainable and profitable food production and marketing systems; and enhancing youth, family and community well-being. U of I Extension has 15 Local Food Systems and Small Farms (LFSSF) Educators working across the state to provide Illinois residents with information, resources, and support to local agriculture. For more information, go to web.extension.illinois.edu, call us at (217) 782-4617 or find us on Facebook (Local Food Systems and Small Farms).

Central Illinois Sustainable Farming Network's (CISFN) mission is to promote the development of local food systems in Central Illinois through farmer support and training. This program network is organized by the U of I Extension. Network members are committed to sustainable farming and are willing to share knowledge and participate in learning opportunities. Visit www.cisfn.org to learn more.

Decatur, IL 62521
(217) 412-8180
dabrbo@yahoo.com

Rabbitry is the focus of my operation with a special focus on purebred Californian rabbits. Californians were an early "hybrid" of three common breeds, with the outcome being a consistent "ideal" animal for meat, fur, and production. My best animals are raised for foundation (herd) replacements and show competition, lesser animals are destined for quality commercial herd replacements, and those remaining animals are genuine meat animals. Available via: Direct-to-consumer sales (call or email).

Why Buy Local?

When you buy locally you not only get good food grown with love, but you support fair wages, the humane treatment of animals, the health of the environment, and the well-being of the local economy. Small family farms are a vibrant part of our local landscape, culture, and community, and when you buy local, you are insuring that they will remain on the land, growing wholesome food for generations to come.

Because Your Choices Matter

1500 miles

That's the average number of miles that food travels before it reaches your grocery store shelf. It typically spends 4-7 days in travel and must be picked before it is ripe. All of these factors compromise freshness, cost, and flavor.

95%

That's the percentage of food that Illinois imports. That means 95% of the money that Illinois residents spend on food is sent out of state instead of being kept in our local economies.

$47 Million

Check it out: if every Illinois household dedicated just $10 of their weekly grocery budget towards products raised in our state, a whopping $47 million would be re-invested in the Illinois economy

Because You Can Make A Difference

Buying local is about more than how you spend your food dollars, it's about supporting what you value. When you buy local, you exercise your power to change our food system and create a world where land, animals, and people are treated with respect.

Buying Meat Farm Direct

Buying meat in bulk direct from the farm allows you to choose the quality of meat that you like, as well as how it was raised, fed, finished, and even cut and packaged. We are lucky in central Illinois as there are many choices: grass-fed or grain-finished? Organic or natural? How about a heritage livestock breed? There are a lot of options!

Should I buy a whole, half, quarter or a meat box?

Consider the following factors before choosing what to buy:

- What types of cuts do you eat the most? Steaks, roast, ground meats, etc.
- How much freezer space do you have?
- How much meat does your family consume on average? Do you eat meat 7 nights a week, or just here and there?
- How much are you comfortable spending?

How much freezer space do I need?

As a general guide, 50 lbs. of meat (about 1/8 of a typical beef cow) will take up half of the freezer in the average home refrigerator. A chest or upright freezer might be a good option if you are thinking of buying a quarter or half a beef. Remember that beef is best stored no more than 9-12 months (3-4 months for ground beef), to maintain freshness. It can be stored longer but the quality will diminish over time.

What does it cost?

Buying meat in bulk will save you money compared to buying individual cuts at the grocery store or farmers market. When you buy in bulk (quarters, halves and wholes) you're paying the same price per pound regardless of cuts: that means you pay the same price for ground beef as you do for filet mignon! To estimate the costs, take into consideration the following:

- How much does the animal itself cost? Most producer charge based on the "hanging weight", the weight of the carcass after inedible parts have been removed.

- For example, a typical steer weighs about 1,200 lbs which yields about a 730 lbs of carcass (referred to as "hanging weight"), which will yield about 490 lbs. of cut meat.
- How much is the processing? This will depend on which processing plant a producer uses and your processing requests. There are a couple of different fees: a slaughter fee or kill fee, cut & wrap (cutting and packaging your meat) and any value-added processing (making bacon, sausage, jerky, etc).

How much and what do I get?

How much meat you will get depends on several factors: size, weight, fat/muscle ratio, carcass age and cutting instructions. Livestock carcasses are often divided into sections known as primals. These are then cut into individual roasts, steaks, etc. The cuts that you get will depend on how much you buy and how the butcher is instructed to cut the primals. In the case of beef, you will most likely receive steak cuts (like new york strips, top sirloins or t-bones), braising and roasting cuts (like chuck roast, rump roasts and brisket), ground beef and miscellaneous items like soup bones and organ meats, if you request them. A half hog will include pork chops, spare ribs, pork shoulder, hocks, ham, ground pork or sausage and bacon. The great thing about buying a whole, half, or quarter animal is that you will receive a large variety of cuts that will allow you to experiment with different recipes and cooking techniques, so dinner is never boring!

Where do I start?

Look for the steak icon in this guide to find farmers who are raising and selling meat products. Read their listing to find out how they raise their livestock and contact them individually via phone or email for specific pricing and any other questions. There are many options to choose from, so

Livestock Lingo

Buying meat direct from local farmers is a great way to support humane practices, but with all of the marketing terms out there, it's easy to get lost in the lingo. Below are some typical terms used to describe how meat is raised and finished. Don't be shy about asking questions when talking to a farmer or rancher and know that, no matter what you choose, there is no right or wrong way to buy local meat.

Certified Organic: Organic certification verifies that a farm or ranch complies with the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) organic regulations and standards. Organic livestock standards address many factors including land and livestock management practices, feed, recordkeeping, medication and supplements.

“Uses Organic Methods or Practices”:

There are costs associated with achieving and maintaining organic certification. Some farmers and ranchers will advertise that they “use organic methods” or “follow organic practices” or are “beyond organic” without being certified as the organic certification may not make fiscal sense for their farm.

Naturally raised: This is a marketing standard established by the USDA. For producers to market their products as “naturally raised” they must produce livestock that has “been raised entirely without growth promotants, antibiotics (with limited exceptions like disease), and have never been fed animal by-products.”

No antibiotics/No hormones: This means the animal has never received either antibiotics or growth hormones.

Grass-fed: This label applies to beef. For meat to be labeled as “grass-fed,” cattle must be fed an exclusive diet of grass and forage plants only, no grain or by-products. Producers can choose to have their grass-fed operations certified: the USDA offers a grass-fed certification, along with organizations like the American Grassfed Association (AGA).

Grain-finished: This term also applies to beef. It usually means the animal was grass-fed for the majority of its life and then fed grain for the last 60-120 days (more or less, depending on the producer's choice) to increase fat and protein in the diet, adding weight and intramuscular fat (marbling) to the animal.

Pasture-raised: This term often applies to hogs and chickens. Hogs and chickens cannot be exclusively “grass-fed”: they are omnivores (unlike cattle which are herbivores). Pasture-raised means the animal spent the majority of their life outdoors, on pasture. It does not mean the animal ate only grass or forages.

Free-Range: This term, very similar to “pasture-raised,” denotes a method of farming, where animals, for at least part of the day, are allowed to roam freely outdoors. The amount of time spent outdoors depends on the farm.

Free-Range Chickens from Seven Sisters Farm

Pastured pork from Sugar Grove Family Farms

Cage-Free: Often referring to poultry and eggs, the term cage-free means that the birds are raised uncaged inside barns and allowed perches and nest boxes to lay their eggs. It does not necessarily mean that they are allowed access to the outdoors. This depends on the farm.

Heritage Breed: Traditional livestock breeds raised by farmers before the industrial revolution. They were bred over time to develop unique traits that make them particularly well-adapted to local environmental conditions.

www.healingacresfarm.blogspot.com

At Healing Acres Farm, sustainable practices, preserving heritage breeds, education and local attention are our primary focus. We offer a large variety of sustainably grown, chemical free produce and micro-greens, and raise 100% grass-fed premium beef, lamb, goat, pastured pork, poultry and eggs. The majority of our animals are on the American Livestock Breeds Conservancy (ALBC) endangered list. Currently we raise Scottish Highland cattle (one of the oldest heritage breeds in the U.S.A), Tamworth hogs (with plans to add Large Blacks), and 4-5 heritage breeds of chickens with plans to add heritage turkeys in 2015. We do not treat our animals with hormones or antibiotics and we do not use chemicals on the land. We have approximately two and a half acres of garden area and 700 square feet under high tunnels. Our vegetables are organically grown and we use non GMO seed, although we are not certified organic. Available via: CSA, Online farmer's market (year round), Edwardsville Goshen Market on Saturday (May-Oct), and the Holiday Markets at the Illinois State Fairgrounds

Simply put, Sangha means community. Sangha Farms uses organic methods in a sustainable manner with a community driven purpose. Their personal journey started years ago, by taking an honest look at their family's health. Growing up overweight created blinders for Justin Turner. Even being diagnosed with hypertension at an early age didn't cause any concern. Inevitably their family, livelihood, and Justin's life would be at great risk, and something had to change. The Turners moved back to Illinois and like their families had done for decades in central Illinois, they decided to start farming. For the Turners, the idea of Sangha manifests itself in the form of clean, delicious, locally grown food that everyone can enjoy. Available via: Legacy of the Land Farmer Co-op, CSA, Bloomington Farmers Market, Sales to restaurants, retailers, and institutions

WHAT'S A CSA?

A CSA, or Community Supported Agriculture, is a great way to support your local farmer and get your fill of farm-fresh produce. Buy a "share" in a local farm at the beginning of the season to help farmers cover the up-front cost of seeds and equipment, and get a "share" of the harvest weekly throughout the season. It's win-win! Know your farmer, know your food, and sign up for a CSA this year. Check out the farms in this guide to find a CSA near you.

Springfield Holiday Farmers Market

An Eater's Manifesto

Eat food. Not too much. Mostly plants.

Do all your eating at a table.

Eat slowly.

Try not to eat alone.

Have a glass of wine with dinner.

Don't eat anything your grandmother wouldn't recognize as food.

Avoid food products containing ingredients that are unfamiliar, unpronounceable, or more than five in number.

Shop the peripheries of the supermarket and stay out of the middle.

Don't get your fuel from the same place your car does.

Pay more, eat less.

Eat well-grown foods from healthy soils.

Eat wild foods when you can.

Cook, and if you can, plant a garden.

-Michael Pollan

Rolling Meadows Brewery is a small production brewery at Rolling Meadows Farm. It began as an appreciation of good beer and a desire to create a fine product utilizing the abundance of natural resources on our farm. We have designed our brand drawing upon our collective experiences of brewing, farming and craftsmanship to create small batch beer in tune with the nuances of our farming tradition. We brew great beer, simply made! Together with several local restaurants and chefs we grow our own hops, vegetables, and grains enhancing the historic agricultural nature of our beer and its sense of place. We use our own artesian well water giving our beer a crisp finish. We produce small batches of beer inspired by the orchard, our hop yard, fruits, berries and the herbs growing in our area. We are proud of our brewery and happy to show you around so please call (217) 899 7239 or email (rmbrewery@gmail.com) for tours of our farm and brewery. Our beer, ABES'S ALE, LINCOLN,S LAGER and SPRINGFIELD WHEAT is available at grocery and liquor stores, farmers markets, and at the brewery. Ask for them at local bars and restaurants!

ILLINOIS STEWARDSHIP ALLIANCE

LOCAL FOOD MATTERS

Illinois Stewardship Alliance is a statewide non-profit organization that promotes environmentally sustainable, economically viable, socially just, local food systems through policy development, advocacy, and education.

Policy Development & Advocacy

As a grassroots organization, we listen to the needs of farmers and develop policies to grow the local food movement on both the state and federal level.

Conservation Education

Illinois Stewardship Alliance educates row crop farmers growing corn and soybeans about practices and programs they can utilize to conserve natural resources and be good stewards of the land.

Local Food Programs & Promotions

ISA connects farmers with new markets and educates the public on the importance of local and sustainably grown foods for our land, our families, and our communities.
