Our Story

BioMarketplace began as a project of Sigma Blood Systems, a firm known for its experience serving the blood banking and bio industries with agile software development.

The Sigma Blood team brainstormed, researched and studied the latest market trends and validated our findings with clients, industry experts and world-class visionaries and decided it was time for a new way for life sciences researchers, providers and organizations to do business. We wanted to go beyond the traditional broker model. We wanted to help you find the right product, service and partner so you can focus on your mission and worry less about the rest.

Our global team has only one priority - to provide you with access to better information, and a faster, easier way to obtain the products and services you need, so you can get back to saving the world.

Biotech and Life Sciences Sourcing Simplified

Created for researchers, healthcare providers, professionals, manufacturers, and many others in the life sciences industry, BioMarketplace.com offers a fresh way to obtain the biological and technological products and services you need. Here, online procurement is secure, easy, and much more convenient than traditional sourcing. With features like comparison shopping, price bidding, and direct messaging between members and partner vendors, you're sure to find exactly what you need, at a price you can live with.

Knowledge is Power! BioMarketplace lets you communicate directly with partner vendors, giving you access to the most accurate, up-to-date information on the market – before you buy.

BioMarketplace.com is designed with you in mind. Our user-friendly interface makes it the easiest, most convenient way to find biotech products and services.

The simplest and direct way to obtain the biologics and services you need – no transaction fees, no commitment, no hassle.
