HOMONYMY IN TOPOONYMICAL LEXIS
AS A LINGUA-ECOLOGICAL PROBLEM

Abstract. In the article the definition of lingua-ecology as an interdisciplinary science studying language phenomena as a part of the system and through the prism of communicative necessities is accepted. A special role of toponymy is determined as the facility of fixing and maintaining unique information in the history of culture. The basic signs of toponymic units, determining their efficiency in the process of functioning are selected as the object of the undertaken analysis. The aim of the article is to expose the contradictions between a language as a system and people's communicative necessities. Some factors deflating the ecology of toponymic space of a certain region are characterized.

Key words: lingua-ecology; homonymy, oikonom; toponymic space of a region; degree of name uniqueness.

IMPERSONAL SENTENCES IN THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE AND THEIR USAGE IN BELLES-LETTRES

Abstract. This article discusses how to use impersonal sentences in the translation of literary texts from English into Russian. The analysis of all the selected examples from foreign texts indicates that despite the absence of direct analogies in English and Russian, there are a number of linguistic features which suggest that English and Russian sentences intercross with each other, however they do not refer to the same class.

Key words: impersonal sentence, structural diversity, functional and stylistic value, impersonality, infinitival sentence

Abstract.. The article considers linguistic and pragmatic arguments explaining the mixture of two graphic systems in the Russian text. The particular emphasis is put on functional and pragmatic aspects of the issue under consideration: dynamics, observed in special texts, possible reasons for it and its actual manifestations. The paper shows that, being a consequence of interlanguage interference, such texts are based on double-bind relationship, reflecting cultural and language specificity of the Russian and English languages.

Key words: double-bind relationship, special-purpose texts, mixed alphabet writing.

SCIENTIFIC APPROACHES TO THE FORMALIZATION OF LANGUAGE

Abstract. The paper dwells on studying different approaches to formalization of language. It analyzes the semantic and syntactic theory of formal semantics, as well as the underlying principle of this scientific field – the compositionality principle. Special attention is paid to defining key terms, actively used in the framework of formal semantics: the lambda-abstraction, lambda-conversion, functional application, etc.

Keywords: formal semantics, the compositionality principle, lambda abstraction, lambda-conversion, functional application.
