

Ingham's WORLD

Daily Express
Friday
March 27 2009

This winter I tested a device designed to transform central heating. The Tadpole is a small gizmo which takes the air out of the system, increasing efficiency and cutting fuel consumption by up to 25 per cent. The coldest winter in a decade means I can't compare fuel use with previous years. But our radiators and water are much hotter and we have never once had to bleed the radiators.