

Help promote Bullying Prevention in the community!

The story behind how this guide was developed:

This work was motivated by a bullying experience that ultimately led the Helm family to home school their three children. They put forth efforts to bring awareness and seek resolution from the school administration in regards to the extreme bullying their child was experiencing. The indifferent posture and middling outcomes from the school administration ultimately led the Helm family to remove their children from an unhealthy toxic environment and resorted to home schooling.

The Helm family's approach in helping their children cope with their bullying experience was very effective. They realized that sharing this strategy can provide assistance and support to others who are going through a similar experience. Thus, they used their first-hand experience of successfully rebuilding their children's self-worth and an online bullying prevention survey conducted in 2015 by Robert Helm using SurveyMonkey.com, to effectively present the information in this guide
