Foundation supplements: The first step to proper conditioning

Foundation supplements are designed to ensure that the rooster's system is ready to absorb and utilize the nutrients necessary for optimum performance. Providing foundation supplements is the first step to proper conditioning. Otherwise, all the special nutrients provided during conditioning may just go to waste.

Foundation supplementation will set the stage for the rooster's body to absorb efficiently the nutrients for specific goals such as blood conditioning, oxygen circulation and energy boosting. Foundation supplements will increase nutrients bio availability, absorption and utilization. Every sound conditioning should begin with sound foundation supplementation.

Proper foundation supplementation will prepare the rooster's body for the better things to come. Without proper foundation supplementation the body may not absorb the nutrients and other conditioning and pointing aids.

Unknown to many foundation supplementation is a vital aspect in gamecock conditioning as it sets the stage for the development of the rooster's physical fitness necessary for the fight.

Usually foundation supplements are multi vitamins and minerals that address the rooster's general well being or amino acids to build muscles and tissues. Most foundation supplements available in the market are of this kind that address only specific concerns.

Ideally, however, foundation supplements should be total and should address all the concerns. Foundation supplementation may consist of more than one supplement so that all the specific goals could be addressed. Unless you use Powergen which, by itself, is a total foundation supplement.

Powergen a total foundation supplement

There is one total foundation supplement that is so complete that it can even stand alone.

Powergen is a total foundation supplement, so complete that it can even stand as a lone conditioning supplement, without any other supplement to complement it.

Yet Powergen is versatile that it may also be effectively applied side by side with other supplements for specific goals. Finally, Powergen is adaptable to any kind of conditioning method from the natural to extreme from light to heavy.

In the following pages of this primer you will know what a total foundation supplement should be and why Powergen is such.

Powergen is a foundation supplement that is good for fighters and brood cocks alike. Because Powergen boosts testosterone level. Increased testosterone level makes a battle cock more aggressive and a brood cock more productive.

What a total foundation supplement should be?

A total foundation supplement should be able to lay the basis for all the main specific goals in conditioning the gamecock and serve as groundwork to successful conditioning. Supplements may be grouped by objectives or by their respective specific goals. In gamecock supplementation the identified objectives are the following:

- For general well being
- Muscle and tissue building
- Blood conditioning & Oxygen circulation
- Energy generation

A total foundation supplement must be able to establish a base for addressing all these goals. An example of a total foundation supplement for gamecock is Powergen.

Powergen can do it all. Powergen has vitamins and minerals as foundation for general well being; amino acids for muscle and tissue building; b complex, amino acids, enzymes, co enzymes, fatty acids and antioxidants for blood and oxygen circulation and energy production. All these come from rice bran extract and the additional gamma oryzanol put in Powergen.

Powergen has the following nutrients: Multi vitamins, minerals, B complex, ferulic acid, alpha lipoic acid and other fatty acids and anti oxidants, coq10 and other enzymes and co enzymes, amino acids, and co factors, +++.

And, of course, phytosterols, a natural anabolic steroids. Phytosterols are sterols derived from plant and serves the anabolic purposes of steroids minus the side effects.

So Powergen is a complete gamecock conditioning supplement as it acts as:.

- Foundation supplement for rooster's general well being
- Anabolic. Builds up muscle and tissues.
- Agent for blood conditioning. Conditions the blood and blood vessels for efficient circulation.

- Oxygenizer. Aids in oxygen circulation through increased hemoglobin count.
- Natural analeptic. Stimulates the central nervous system and respiratory system.
- Suppressant. The gamma oryzanol component cycloartenol ferulic acid ester has been shown to exert a suppressant effect on the central nervous system, making the rooster more focus on the fight.
- Testosterone booster. Increased testosterone level makes a battle cock more game and a brood cock more productive.
- Energy booster. Fires up the generation of energy during strenuous activities and at fight time.

But, Powergen has steroids, isn't it harmful?

Well, what could be a fifth classification of supplements would be hormone boosting supplements. Mostly these are performance enhancing drugs that are banned in human athletic competitions or in many cases in horse racing and pigeon racing. Because there is no such ban in cockfighting, hormone boosting supplements could be used on gamecocks. These supplements are aimed at increasing power, strength, speed, energy and stamina by altering the metabolic and hormonal processes of the body. Steroids lead to benefits, but there are side effects.

Same as in chickens. The use of anabolic steroids is practiced, and also questioned.

These drugs do work, but it involves risk to the performance of the rooster considering the chicken's delicate senses. One such PED are anabolic steroids. There are products for gamecocks that contain anabolic steroids. Anabolic steroids increase muscle mass and, thus strength, power and speed. But, anabolic steroids have many side effects. One side effect of anabolic steroid on fighting roosters is over aggressiveness, which could be fatal in combat wherein a fighter's first mistake could be its last.

So Powergen could be harmful?

No because the anabolic steroid in Powergen comes from plant sterols. There is no negative side effect with sterol, the natural anabolic steroid. Sterols are natural steroid alcohols that stimulate certain metabolic, growth and immune processes. Sterols of plants are called phytosterols and sterols of animals are called zoosterols. Phytosterols boost testosterone production and provide anabolic steroid-like benefits without the detrimental side effects. When used as part of the gamecock's conditioning regimen, these potent chemicals are capable of boosting strength, performance and fat-free mass. In addition they act as a testosterone potentiator. The roosters will enjoy all of the anabolic benefits of carefully optimized androgen levels, including high energy, enhanced protein production, increased strength and optimal performance. All these could be attained by sterols supplementation coupled with ample exercises.

Won't heavy exercise result in negative effects?

There will be no negative effects if you used Powergen. Although, these conditioning exercises increase the free radical load and can result in harmful free radical and toxic build up, sterols, again play another positive role by getting rid of free radicals and toxins because sterol contains powerful antioxidants, like alpha-lipoic acid and citrus bioflavonoids, as well as several detoxifying agents. Natural Sterol in gamma oryzanol is not only a powerful performance enhancer it also provides gamecocks with beneficial substances such as antioxidants, detoxifiers, hormone modulators and suppressors, and others derived from potent plant chemicals.

The natural sterol in gamma oryzanol proves that anabolic steroids are not the only products capable of optimizing hormone levels and causing massive gains in strength and size. Natural sterol in gamma oryzanol boosts testosterone, down regulates estrogen and helps roosters to reach peak performance. In short it has all the benefits of anabolic steroid minus the side effects, including over aggressiveness.

With anabolic steroid-like effects, won't Powergen make the gamecock too muscular for slasher fighting?

At first glance you may say gamecocks, set to fight in Filipino slasher knife don't need those muscles. For after all, how long does a slasher fight last? Just seconds or a few minutes. But a closer look will reveal that in humans, sprinters are muscular, while marathon runners are more skinny. It has something to do with the types of muscles they respectively favor. Like sprints, Filipino sabong is a fast sport, therefore, our gamecocks should favor the same type of muscles that sprinters develop.—the fast twitch muscles. To avoid becoming too technical, let's just put it this way, that gamecocks should be muscular like sprinters.

Is Powergen convenient and easy to use?

Yes Powergen is convenient to use because it is complete, Powergen can even stand alone and is effective without any other supplement. Powergen is also compatible with all conditioning regimen from light to heavy. It can stand alone, but it can work in conjunction with other conditioning and pointing supplements.

Powergen is also very easy to administer (See Powergen recommended applications on the next page).

Is Powergen economical?

Yes Powergen is very economical. Powergen may cost as low as P40 per head/conditioning. Whereas, some conditioning supplementation sets will cost up to P500 or even more per head/conditioning. Indeed, Powergen is something that is truly for the masang sabungero.
